Read the passage and choose the best answer to each question:

Choosing a career is an important life decision, so most people would often ask for opinions of friends and family. To help people come closer to finding a satisfying career, a psychologist named John Holland spent more than 50 years on developing and creating a set of six personality types. This passage discusses 4 of them.

Realistic: Realistic people like to work with things they can see or touch. They are inclined to solve problems by doing things, rather than thinking or talking about them. They generally like to work outside and are good with tools, machines, plants, and animals. They work well both alone and in a team. Job matches: carpenter, chef, nurse, pilot.

Investigative: People of this personality type value ideas and are strong at tasks that allow them to investigate facts and figure out complex problems. They are better at individual work like research and study, rather than leading groups of people or working in teams. Job matches: computer programmer, historian, psychologist, surgeon.

Social: Social personalities love to work with people. They get the most satisfaction out of teaching and helping others, and are driven to serve the community as opposed to making money. Job matches: coach, counselor, social worker, teacher.

Enterprising: Many great leaders and business people have enterprising personalities. These are persuasive people who are good at making decisions and leading teams. They tend to value money, power, and status, and will work toward achieving them. Job matches: business owner, event manager, lawyer, salesperson.

Read the passage and choose the best answer to each question:

Choosing a career is an important life decision, so most people would often ask for opinions of friends and family. To help people come closer to finding a satisfying career, a psychologist named John Holland spent more than 50 years on developing and creating a set of six personality types. This passage discusses 4 of them.

Realistic: Realistic people like to work with things they can see or touch. They are inclined to solve problems by doing things, rather than thinking or talking about them. They generally like to work outside and are good with tools, machines, plants, and animals. They work well both alone and in a team. Job matches: carpenter, chef, nurse, pilot.

Investigative: People of this personality type value ideas and are strong at tasks that allow them to investigate facts and figure out complex problems. They are better at individual work like research and study, rather than leading groups of people or working in teams. Job matches: computer programmer, historian, psychologist, surgeon.

Social: Social personalities love to work with people. They get the most satisfaction out of teaching and helping others, and are driven to serve the community as opposed to making money. Job matches: coach, counselor, social worker, teacher.

Enterprising: Many great leaders and business people have enterprising personalities. These are persuasive people who are good at making decisions and leading teams. They tend to value money, power, and status, and will work toward achieving them. Job matches: business owner, event manager, lawyer, salesperson.
